THE PRESIDENT

Of the City Council Wilkesbarre, Pa., Cured of Rheumatism.

Col. Wm. J. Harvey, a president of Wilkesbarre's city council, who will long be remembered for his great work for the city, was once a mere physical wreck, torn in every muscle and nerve from the frightful pains caused by rheumatism. He consulted the best physicians, went abroad, took mud baths, and almost every known treatment for the disease. One of the city officials had had a very similar experience and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had cured him, so he recommended this great kidney medicine to his friend, and Col. Harvey is today a well man, hale and hearty. In his own abrupt way he states his case:

Dr. David Kennedy, Dear Sir:—This is to certify that I was permanently cured of rheumatism by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Wm. J. HARVEY.

Nothing could be more direct or more to the point than this simple statement.

Rheumatism is but another name for uric acid poisoning which is caused primarily by diseased kidneys. Cure your kidneys and the rheumatism disappears.

For all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as sickness peculiar to women, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is unquestionably the greatest medicine known to the medical profession.

All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in the 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles.

THE ROSES' MESSAGE.

Flowers bloom in field and garden, By the roadside, everywhere, But the picture is not perfect Till you plant the roses there.

Bring the fairest tints and colors, Softest shades and deepest hue; Let the queen of summer's flowers From the canvass speak to you.

Ah, you cannot paint the roses! All your painting wrought with care But a subtle hint discloses Of their beauty rich and rare.

Give me roses, fragrant roses! Fairest of the summer's flowers; Let the breeze lightly touch them, Whispering thro' the leafy bowers.

Give me roses, perfect roses! By the Master Artist planned, White or pink or deepest crimson, Touched by His unerring hand!

Let them bring their own sweet message, While the sunny days pass by; Blooming to reveal the beauty Of God's thought to you and I.

Flightly.

As Kitty was rushing down hill, one day At a rapid, extravagant pace, She chanced to spy

A cloud in the sky As set and as late as lace. That slow moving haze

It enraptured her gaze, With a smile on her face She stilled her pace.

But forgot to step down, And thus she drifted into space. I think 'twas the earlier part of the spring

She began her aerial race, For all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as sickness peculiar to women, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is unquestionably the greatest medicine known to the medical profession.

Restored her again to her place. She went up with the fall, And came down with the fall. Sure! And that ended the chase.

Dad's Homesick.

The old man is gittin' homesick, Says he's long enough away

As he lugs it day by day, 'Says he's tired of his life here

For life's a long haul, and he's tired of his life here, An' he's homesick now and waitin'

For the trumpet call, The boys are in the line, and he's tired of his life here, An' he's homesick now and waitin'

For the trumpet call, None of 'em would stay at home, But they left poor Dad and mother

For to the farm alone, An' now Dad can hardly toddle, 'Says he's longin' for to go

Just a waitin' God to call him, From his troubles here below.

There's a gittin' homesick, And he's longin' for to go, For Saint Peter's call to enter

All his joys and troubles over, Dad is sure gittin' homesick, Waitin' for the trumpet call

Waitin' for what Jesus promised: Better home on Father's shore, And to meet the many loved ones

Who have been called home before, Since so feeble he has grown; Little for the Lord to call him— Homesick on his journey home.

The Piazza Parlor.

The summer piazza is a summer joy! Once it was a place of sun and doubt,

Of bugs and mosquitoes and of discomfort. Now it is the dwelling place of all that is pure and delightful. It is the summer living spot, the place where all repair at all times of day and at all times of night. It is the cozy corner ideal; the spot without which there can be no summer home and no summer at all.

There are many new things about the summer piazza, that one hearing about them is disposed to wonder if a person ever really knew what a piazza was before.

The man who has owned a piazza other seasons has been accused of not doing many things which he does not do now.

He has brought in the pillows at night. He has done the same trick with the rugs.

He has performed stunts with the furniture, moving it about so that the rain would not beat upon it.

The tables, he has either drawn to the innermost corner of the piazza, or he has covered with canvas, and as for the couches and the foot-stools, well these have been so scarce that he has not bothered himself much about them.

Now the up-to-date summer piazza is fitted out with furniture which suits put. It's couch of bamboo is wettable; and the cushions that trim it so prettily, and which are in all colors of the rainbow, can be wet without injury. They are made of grass, and stuffed with grass.

Of course, as this is an airy affair, the grass is fragrant; and after a while the cushions are lovely with their delicate aroma.

The rugs in the new piazza room are of the wood-bire kind but of a new variety. They are partly grass and, though they are no longer green, they are pretty and brown, and you feel that you can walk upon them without injuring them.

For a shower it is really beneficial to the rugs to the grass pillows.

There are wonderful screen chairs in the modern piazzas. They have grass or straw backs that are very high. One of these chairs,—one of the very latest,—has a back of such a height that it serves as a screen. Turn your chair around and you are shut away from the world.

The screen chair is a delightful thing if one is afflicted with visitors at an important moment. Turn your chair around and you are shut away from the world.

The piazza is vacant and only the chair stares at the visitor, the back which is built like a screen.

There is another virtue about this screen chair. It is built for two; and when two sit in it, and turn around, they are immediately alone. This is the time when the world forgetting and the world forgot is particularly applicable.

If you want to make a screen chair, be sure that the back is six feet tall and the seat at least a yard wide—wide enough for you and another—and have the seats rather deep. You must have wide arms.

And the chair must present a substantial look as one feels its burden.

There is a glorified footstool that comes this season and it is one of those contrivances that can be made at home.

The material, if you are its maker, should work. There is no top to this stool, only uprights, joined by cross pieces, so that one's feet may rest on top with ease, or in the sides, or in any manner that may be agreeable, when one is tired with golf.

It is impossible to scratch this open-work footstool, for it has no top and, as for wearing out, warping, becoming lumpy or getting out of shape, this also is impossible. It makes a nice little stand for books which can rest comfortably upon its lattice.

The roof-swing or the piazza-swing is something that needs only to be described in order to fascinate.

cloth cushions for seat and back. It is then elevated by ropes until it swings free from the back. It swings free from the piazza. This makes a swing of it. There come piazza swings that answer this description but the man who yearns to make his own swing can buy a couch and hang it all.

Chairs with wide arms, couches with little shelves in them, the dearest and squarest little foot rests, all these are in the new summer furniture in wide variety and in great numbers.

There are couches that have a lifting seat in which there are stored croquet balls, mallets and garden implements. And there are other couches so built that you lift them entirely and place articles underneath the couch, which is hollow.

The English courting chair has found its way to the roof and into the affections of the summer man and girl. It is made of very heavy timber and its arms are wide and comforting.

In all the new piazza furniture there is one thing to be noticed and that is its durability. It can be wet; it can be left out over night; it is improved by the dews of dusk; and it does not mildew, warp or show wear and tear with the season. Its nature and build are such that it endures all weather.

Iron furniture is neither pretty nor comfortable, and except for very hard usage, is not to be recommended.

It must be remarked that summer furniture is particularly built for the summer man. It is he who enjoys getting out upon the piazza at night and he who loves to linger upon the roof while the stars come out and shine for him particularly.

E. W. PENLEY,

WEST PARIS, ME.

Newspaper Men at Play.

Once a year the members of that journalistic organization of Maine, known to the world as the Maine Press Association, lay aside the weighty responsibilities of sponging the ways and thoughts of the world and take a vacation. That is, all those who think the world can spare them that short space of time, a week or more according to trip taken. This has never retarded the wheels of progress in the thirty-eight years of the association's existence, because all of the members of the association have never left their posts of duty at one time.

This is the first excursion the writer has ever attended, so there is great excuse for seeing new pleasures with unaccustomed eyes, aided and abetted by the personal charm of so many witty, brainy and charming people.

The association was organized in 1864 and they have visited some noted place in their own or other states. Moosehead Lake and Mount Kineo were the places decided to be visited at the meeting at Portland, last winter, and J. M. S. Hunter of Falmington was the one chosen to conduct the excursion.

This seems to be a favorite trip for it is the fourth time they have visited this place. 1877, 1888, 1889 and 1902. Headquarters were at the famous Kineo House, C. A. Judkins, manager. This was early in the season before the arrival of the summer guests who will be at the house through July, August and late in the fall. We practically had things our own way, and the manager and his large corps of efficient helpers did everything to make our stay pleasant.

Monday the party gathered from various parts of the state. The Maine Central railroad extended special courtesies. From Newburg Junction to Moosehead Lake at Greenville the members were furnished a car by themselves. From this point a delightful ride up the lake in the steamboat Rebecca took us to Mount Kineo in the early evening. Here the freedom of the peninsula was given us. When we had all got together and got acquainted we found our force some sixty strong.

Judge Henry R. Baker, the oldest citizen of Hallowell, died June 28, aged 95. He was the oldest member of the Maine Press Association and one of the oldest lawyers in the state.

The Association held memorial exercises and fitting eulogy was spoken by W. F. Marston of Hallowell and Maj. E. Rowell of Portland.

Tuesday morning it rained but by nine o'clock the sun seemed to shine again. The fishermen procured guides and went forth in canoes to conquer the monsters in Moosehead's depths. The moon and lake trout were served the next morning. Some walked to Pebble Beach about three quarters of a mile through the woods. This beach is covered with small round pebbles worked upon a bar across the lake. At one side a rugged side of Mount Kineo overhangs the scene. Others climbed the mountain. Steps are built up the almost perpendicular side and one has to cling to the rail or chain. A slip and a fall would bring almost certain death. At the top paths take you to the most slightly places on the several sides of the mountain. From hornblende bluff you look straight down on the hotel.

Our party was seated on the edge of one of the highest cliffs when the roar of distant thunder was heard, we looked behind and there was a black thunder cloud. We thought we had better get down and we started, but the rain reached us, the rocks and the stairs became slippery, caution overcame haste, and a furious hail storm and wind added its mite. We reached the hotel in safety, soaking wet.

The Indian camp with its baskets, moccasins, war clubs and other Indian fancy work is another attraction; also the deer park with its tame deer. This park is just in the edge of the forest and they are frequently visited by the wild deer, which may be seen from the windows of the hotel quite near. They are however, watchful for danger and at the least noise raise the white flag and skip for the woods. Then there was lawn tennis, bathing, bicycling, boating, etc.

Tuesday the Maine Press Association dinner was served. The evening was spent socially. There was vocal and instrumental music.

Wednesday, we were invited to visit the Moosehead Hatchery at Squaw brook. The steamer Kineo was at the wharf to take us down the lake. We were poled up Squaw brook on a scow, assisted a part of the way by a naphtha launch, under the guidance of Charles Nichols, who has charge of the hatchery.

A short walk over a woodland road and corduroy bridges brought us to the new State hatchery. It is the largest hatchery in Maine, and has a capacity for two million of fry annually. About twenty-five hundred thousand of these are landlocked salmon and the rest are spotted trout. As this hatchery was built last year, this is first season, and the fish were about the same size, about an inch long. The spawn remains in the cold water all winter and the fish hatch in the spring. The next fall they are put into the streams flowing into the lakes destined to be their future homes, till some fisherman or some other evil befalls them.

A new two-story cottage has been built for the superintendent. It is sheathed with hard pine, with hardwood floors throughout. In the rooms were many sportsmen's trophies. At the cottage we were tendered a reception. Punch was served from a bowl buried in ferns, also other dainty refreshments.

We returned to the hotel at two o'clock dinner, after which we again embarked on the steamer Kineo and were taken to Echo Cliff. The steambot came out right under the overhanging mountain rising a sheer thousand feet, one solid block of stone, made beautiful by different colors in nature's mosaic work. The water at its base is said to be very deep. It is awe-inspiring. "Let us get out of this," said one, "my life has not been such that I don't want to stay here."

The steamer went out a short distance in the lake and the whistle echoed and reechoed from up the side of the precipice.

The men had a baseball game on the grounds in front of the hotel. It was a most remarkable game, the end of which we are unable to describe, but it was watched with wonder. In the evening, there was a dance and rose in splendor, "Thursday the sun rose in splendor, but 'Frank behind a cloud' and then the rain poured. This did not prevent a buckboard ride to Deer Head farm five miles from the hotel. This farm is run in connection with the hotel. We were greeted cordially and returned well repaid for the ride through the rain.

The office open fire was a great attraction during the evening and house parties like ping-pong, pool, cards and the library claimed attention.

The Devil's Delight and Moody Island are other places to visit. The Northward H. Golf Club's links are the admiration of veteran golfers. Canoe trips to points of interest are the sure things for fair days.

Moosehead lake is forty miles in length and Mt. Kineo is just half way. Steamers make regular trips during the summer season.

The Kineo hotel and its cottages are a village complete in themselves. We were shown through kitchen, laundry, cold storages, store, power rooms, lunch rooms, dining rooms, linen closets, and many others outside the guests apartments with their many busy workers and modern machinery, and we could not but admire the neatness in the inside and out of sight workings of this great industry. The house has its own electric and steam, in short is a great summer hotel that gives its city guests the luxuries of city life in country surroundings.

The new addition adds seventy sleeping rooms, besides other improvements. These sleeping rooms are beautiful, are all practically alike and have bath connection. The great dining room seats four hundred guests and the hallway, the music room, billiard room, card rooms and parlors with the fifteen feet broad piazza eight hundred feet in length make it an ideal place on a rainy day.

Friday, the fourth, the day our nation celebrates, was unusually quiet. A special dinner was served and the week just bristled with patriotism. In the evening there was a bonfire and fireworks on the lake.

In the morning those who were prevented from visiting Deer Head farm on account of the rain the day before were taken over on a buckboard and treated to a longer ride than the others over the old road through the woods. The large vegetable gardens were looked at and discussed, the cows which furnish the hotel milk supply, also the spring that gives the purest drinking water. One hundred little white pigs less than four weeks old were one of the sights worth seeing.

There are almost endless views for the camera and our party took away several to be later developed into souvenirs of the week at Mt. Kineo.

Manager Judkins invited our company to meet on the front piazza. We were most of us there and just as we were expecting something the fire alarm sounded. The fire company rushed on the scene and great excitement prevailed till we found out it was just an exhibition demonstration. It was a good joke and thoroughly worked us up.

In the afternoon the ladies took canoe rides under the care of trusty guides to the cliff, gull rock, around Kineo and other places. This was a great treat as many of them had never had a canoe ride before.

An impromptu musicale was given by the Association in the evening. Refreshments and ices were served by the head waiter and several assistants.

Saturday morning we regretfully started for home and as the steamer left the wharf we gave three hearty cheers for the youthful manager of Mt. Kineo House and three for Mt. Kineo.

Charles Allen Judkins was born at Auburn in 1869, but his childhood and parents moved to Stoneham, Mass., returning again to Auburn in 1877. Thus it was that Mr. Judkins spent his boyhood and school days there, assuming numerous fine positions while he passed through the lower grades and the high school. Here it was that he learned to love work and activity, and acquired the habit of early rising, which still clings to him.

In 1887, he went to Portland, where he took a course in a commercial college, and the following spring he came to Kineo as book-keeper, remaining during the season. In that fall he went to Lewiston to enter the employ of Beane & Wilson, prominent lumbermen, where he remained one year, resigning to go South in 1889, to enter the employ of the Fort Payne Coal Company of Fort Payne, Ala. A short time after, he became the book-keeper for the Fort Payne bank, and finally a teller, remaining there two years.

In June, 1902, he was at Kineo again in the capacity of bookkeeper, and he has remained here since. In the spring of 1898 he became assistant manager, and in the fall, on the retirement of Manager O. A. Denison on account of ill health, he became its manager.

For some years before Manager Judkins took hold, it was an open secret that the Kineo company was making just about enough money to pay the salary of its manager. The first year of Mr. Judkins' management was sufficient to convince the directors that an 80-room addition was necessary, and the following year it was built. Other changes came in order.

He is a young man, barely 33 years of age, without a doubt the youngest manager at the head of so large a similar concern in the country. Kineo is not for sale, but it would take more than $200,000 to buy it if it were.

During three years, the duration of Mr. Judkins' management, this valuation has increased $150,000.

Kineo's management requires more than a knowledge of a hotel. In addition there is a store, which does a enormous business each year, a steamboat fleet, a farm, telephone and telegraph companies and many minor matters.

The manager's duties are not done at Kineo with the close of the season, but from one year's end to the next, from early morning until late at night, there is something to demand his attention, yet in spite of all this, Manager Judkins finds time to be "nice" to his guests, to take his part in a golf tournament, pitch for a ball game, play quarts with the "old gang," drive a friend to the farm, or take a party of guests about the lake on the natty little steamer "Kineo."

He is a good shot with rifle and revolver, a tireless snowshoer, a good billiard player, he knows a good horse, enjoys a good dinner and likes to meet people.

While the press has presented an endless number of illustrations of the Mont Pelée disaster, the illustrations in the July Cosmopolitan, printed on fine paper with the most careful art, give a clearer idea of just what that disaster means than anything hitherto presented.

In the series "Captains of Industry," the Cosmopolitan has undertaken to present a series of brief sketches of the men who are leaders in finance, and in commerce, not prepared in an offhand way, but by writers of the greatest ability who have an exact knowledge of their subjects. The series thus far produced has attracted the widest attention.

Diminished Vitality.

Some people talk very flippantly about diminished vitality. They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that it is that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depends.

Diminished vitality is early indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer.

Pleasant and Tom and the Sweden hills for a background and on the west, across a smaller valley rise Green and Hurricane mountains of Conway and Chatham with Pequaket or Kearsarge, Double Head and others of the range in full view.

The older members of the party fully appreciated the wonderful beauty of the landscape and all enjoyed the delicious cake, ice cream and fruit eaten in the shade of the old oak and beech trees which have stood beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitants. Fourth of July morning, at nine o'clock, while Charles McKean's family had gone to East Stoneham, Wallace Jones from North Waterbury who was on his way to East Stoneham for a load of chucks, discovered McKean's house on fire.

He gave the alarm and the neighborhood rushed to his assistance but it was impossible to save the house. They saved most of the goods down stairs but nothing up stairs.

BUCKFIELD.

Court News.
A warrant was sworn out by parties from Hartford, a few days since, for the arrest of a man for beating his horse, but the man left for parts unknown. Rum figures in the case as usual.

The old cannon which was sold to a junk dealer was replenished by force of hands and arms later on. It seems that C. H. Prince and Clinton Ripley obtained it in war time and it has graced the lawn for a time, and been used for firing salutes, and the people hold it as a treasure.

G. D. Bisbee was in town, July 2, and rumor has it that he settled the damage case with Victor Pearson.

A poor armed and bruised young man came to town on July 4th. He came from the Singeopole mine in Paris claiming he had been assaulted by the crew. A warrant was sworn out and deputy Warren and sheriff Tucker arrested them before Judge Parsons. Owing to testimony given the wrong parties were arrested and these were discharged. Dyer for prosecution. Monday another was arraigned before the same justice with the same evidence personally but very differently rendered, hence an acquittal. Walter Gray of Paris for respondents. Whether special evidence for special occasions will be allowed to pass unrebuked we are not certain.

Sheriff Tucker found a young fellow drunk, arrested, fined $3, and cost amounting to nearly $10. He made a seizure of hard stuff, hence more of the fruits of the rum curse. When the boy was fined a man remarked, "Queer isn't it, go out of town to get a drunk to fine when we have a plenty at home." But this is an innovation.

Same day, adultery, same place, same judge, on complaint of A. E. Cole, selectman, one Wing and a Mrs. Robbins, she that seems to have alienated the affections of Wing from his lawful spouse, who have been living in an abandoned schoolhouse on Streaked mountain, were brought to bay by sheriff Bassett, convicted through the testimony of Wing's two sons of probable age, and required to furnish bonds, $800 each, or go to jail. The latter being the more available was accepted.

These parties have been living in this manner, being helped by the town until the authorities of East Livermore of which town the Wings belong by entail, for so, these many years, requested that proceedings be instituted. While Wing went to jail the wife and mother and two sons were sent to East Livermore as per request of the selectmen of that place. The young men were able to earn wages, the older one especially.

Joshua Heald and wife of North Buckfield dined on the fourth with their son, Dr. Harry, also J. H. Corey and son Winchester of Salem, Mass., father and brother of Mrs. Heald. In the afternoon they attended the Heald reunion on Summer hill, at the old grandfather's home.

After cold days and rain the Fourth of July dawned upon us bright and beautiful. No, Buckfield never celebrates in royal style. The usual tumult commenced a little before the day began, with fire crackers and other explosives. The church bells rang out early and continued late, one of which was about 30 feet from where we lay at rest? In the morning from the removal of signs, farming implements, etc., it was evident that somebody had been quite industrious. One out building adjoined the village square which was later burned on the spot. No perceptible signs of the ardent and no destruction wrought, hence all things were pleasant.

ANDOVER.

Orderly and in Order.
We are having a few days of lovely sunshine. Farmers are thinking of haying. It seems as if with the plentiful rain that a large crop would be harvested, but some report not as good a one as last year.

The glorious Fourth was ushered in with the blowing of a shrill whistle which commenced at 3 a. m. and the ringing of bells with an occasional salute fired off. The day was all that could be desired. At 10 a. m. the horribles appeared. First a float representing the selectmen; then one representing W. A. Barnes' steam mill; then the village assembly, etc. A large crowd assembled at the village. There was a wheelbarrow race won by Sylvanus Hoyt. Then a foot race won by Loring Hoyt who is a guest at Henry V. Poor's. The day was rainy and the evening cloudy, yet some 90 persons took supper in the Grange dining-room. The entertainment was held in the church and was of great merit. It consisted of a great variety of recitations and songs, all of which were good and several were very fine. It was unfortunate that Mr. Barker was unable on account of sickness to be present, but he expressed his high appreciation on the following Sabbath. The net financial result was about $18.00 in cash, together with a variety of glassware.

Tell the Truth and Let the Voters Decide for Themselves.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:—I would like to ask through the columns of your paper what the people in and about South Hiram and Kezar Falls mean about the candidate for high sheriff taking a forged bond from one E. F. Gentleman and on that bond performing the function called for, then giving the bond to F. A. Fox, esq., and after a few days called for the bond. Fox gave up the bond anticipating nothing wrong. After a little investigating Fox called upon Mr. Flint for the bond. Mr. Flint said he had burned the bond, for he thought Mr. Gentleman had all he could bear under the circumstances.

Is that the oath Mr. Flint took when he became one of our sheriffs, that he would help a criminal out of trouble, that he would refuse to right a wrong? Has not the Republican party any other men to become high sheriff except this man Flint?

They tell me the Democrats have nominated a

NORTH LOVELL.

Flourishing Young Lodge.
Mystal Valley Rebekah Lodge, No.
100, of O. O. F. E. is one of the youngest lodges in this state, but has shown itself to be a sturdy infant and of rapid growth in promulgating the principles of Friendship, Love and Truth and in rendering valuable assistance to the local lodge of Odd Fellows. Many pleasant gatherings of the members have recently been enjoyed. Monday evening, June 23, the degree team of Evergreen Lodge of North Waterford visited and exemplified the beautiful work of the order for the four candidates who were admitted to membership at that time.

About 30 members of Evergreen Lodge came to North Lovell, arriving shortly after 6 p. m. A supper was served there and guests from Fryeburg at 7.30 o'clock, after which the meeting was called to order by the Noble Grand,
Mrs. Lizzie McAllister.

The four candidates managed to live through the strenuous life of the Rebekah degree and survived without any broken limbs. Their condition was such, however, as to require some refreshments. This contingency had been foreseen by the far sighted committee in charge of the affair and the victims and the visitors were regaled with cake and cream and thoroughly enjoyed the social hour which followed.

Crystal Valley Lodge now numbers nearly 75 members and six more are to be initiated at the next meeting. The committee in charge of the affair here reported consisted of Mrs. Sarah Hill, Mrs. Carrie Hartman, Mrs. Ellen Saw-

IN THE SHELTER of the STRIPES

By JOHN HABBERTON
Copyright, 1902, by John Habberton

TWO of the oldest men at Farway had shouted themselves hoarse several times on Memorial day, but when at sunset they met at the drugstore and drained two glasses of soda water to the memory of the dead and in honor of the living survivors they resolved informally that, although the new-fangled patriotic holidays were very good and proper in their way, there was no sensible reason why the Fourth of July should be allowed to pass, as it had done for some seasons, as unnoticed as if it were a last year's almanac. Neither of them had fought under Washington or even seen him, but as both were far past eighty both had known survivors of the colonial army, even in their own families. Indeed Farway itself had been "located" and settled by survivors of the Revolutionary war, and the dust of these worthies had specially consecrated the little cemetery on the eastern slope of Farway hill.

"An' they're clean done forgot even by us that ought to know better," complained Jasper Howtree, whose father had been one of the soldier founders of the village. "The trouble begun as far back as when I was a youngster, for the war of 1812 was just over, an' we heard so much about Gin'ral Scott at Lady's Lane an' Gin'ral Jackson at New Orleans an' Hull's victory that we come nigh forgettin' about Gin'ral Washington an' his fights, though we was kinder reminded ev'ry time the Fourth come round. Then come the Mexican war, with Scott an' Taylor to know for an' afterward to vote for an' we lost our memories some more. About twenty-five year after that come the big war, an' then we hadn't no thought of nothin' but the work on hand. You know I was in it with all my heart, an' all the rest of me would have been there, too, if the recruitin' officers—drat their upstart pictures—hadn't said I was too old. Old—an' I've done fifty-two weeks of good, hard work ev'ry year from that time to this, although I am risin' eighty-seven year!"

The fellow cut east at Washington meant well, but they didn't seem to know that out here, in God's own country, the older a man grows the better the stuff that's in him. But, as I was sayin', we didn't have no Fourth the first year of the war nor in the other years either. The Revolution an' all the other wars seemed to be elbowed out of the procession by the fuss 'tween the north an' the south."

"An' the other wars never got back except in books," said Calvin Beantassel, who regarded himself as a stepson of the Revolution, for his mother, widowed while still young, had married a Revolutionary survivor, who, when fighting beneath his mother's banner, had been killed. "Tain't fair to the dead; tain't fair to the livin'; tain't fair to the country; tain't fair to the universe. Anything that did so much for America an' the hull world as the American Revolution is wuth all it cost, an' it ought to be kept in mind."

"That's so," assented Howtree, "an' what ort to be done can be done if there's any men to do it. Now, why can't you an' me bring about a change? You an' me have got the spirit an' we've got the understandin' of the matter an' likewise we've got some folks that don't generally go ag'in us, an' I reckon you an' me wouldn't suffer much if we put up a few dollars to get up an old fashioned, genuine Fourth, with all the fixin's that we can remember. Nobody ever knowed either of us, no matter how big our families or how bad the crops an' the prices of produce, to be close fisted when a circus come round. Well, the Fourth's wuth a million circuses."

"That's the talk!" shouted Beantassel. "Now, s'pose we just appoint ourselves a committee of two to get up a Fourth such as there used to be. We'll have to be spy, for we've got only five weeks to do it in, but let's put up a notice at the postoffice tellin' people what to expect an' sayin' that we assume full management of the proceedin's an' responsibility for 'em, so's to freeze out the upstarts that think they know how to do ev'rythin' that's bein' done. I think."

Howtree waited expectantly for what Beantassel thought, but suddenly the thinner seemed strangely embarrassed, so Howtree said:

"Well, did that think of yourn run up ag'in a stump?"

"No," replied Beantassel, almost in a whisper, "but here comes that high-strung old Virginian, Jefferson Runnels. He'd be a good man to have on the committee with us, for Virginians won't be behind the door when Revolutionary patriotism was dealt out, but—"

"Well, but what?"

"Well, I dunno, 'cept 'ptaps that old row 'tween his gran'darter an' your son Sam."

"That old row is dead, been dead nearly ten year," said Howtree, "an' my family's been tryin' to bury it ever since. Anyhow, let the dead bury its dead; the livin' won't prevent—not them on my side of the fence. Next to us, Runnels is the oldest man in town. Let's rope him into the job."

"Good evenin', gen'l'men," said Runnels. "I come up to drink to the memory of all the brave men who fell durin' the war. Won't you come up?" asked Howtree. "They were all Americans; some we. I wish they were all alive ag'in, for somethin' that Beany an' I

Beantassel. "The only man in town that's got a Revolutionary musket oughtn't to be left out."

"That's so, sure enough," said Howtree. "Look here. What's the matter with you and the Revolutionary musket standin' at 'present arms' while the flag's goin' up an' bein' saluted? There won't be nothin' like it in all the country round."

Beantassel said nothing. He could not, for his vivid imagination showed him a picture of himself as the sole military force at the colors, and the picture caused him to assume what he took to be a military attitude, of which closely pressed lips was the most obtrusive detail.

"The immortal Declaration will have to be read," suggested Runnels, "an' who's to do it? I'd like to do it myself, seein' I'm a Virginian an' a Virginian wrote it, but I don't believe my voice would be equal to the demand. Mr. Howtree, why can't your son Sam do it? He used to speak pieces powerful fiery at the exhibitions when I was a member of the school board."

"I dunno 'bout Sam," replied Howtree, shaking his head doubtfully. "He's more'n thirty year old, an' there ain't a better all round man in the county, but for all that he's one of the take-a-back-seid kind when any showin' 'off's goin' on."

"I reckon," said Runnels, "that if a gal, my Virginia, can stand it to show off, as you call it, no grownup man has got any excuse to be shy. It's only to be before old friends and neighbors. If your Sam won't, then my Virginia won't."

"That settles it!" shouted Howtree, coloring a little, while his old eyes flashed. "Sam won't take a dare from no gal, not even from your Virginia, who?"

Runnels stepped quickly toward the speaker. Beantassel instinctively stepped between the two men, for he recalled past differences which had seemed to threaten blows, all on account of the long past quarrel between Sam and Virginia.

"You said, sub," Runnels announced slowly and clearly, "that your son would not take a dare from any girl, even from my Virginia, who?"

"Who is as splendid a gal as any I ever saw, except maybe the one I married," said Howtree.

The two old men shook hands with many gestures of courtesy. As they did so they unwittingly struck upon the toes of the would be peace-maker, but Beantassel did not protest, or he was looking forward to what he hoped might come of the association of Sam Howtree's father and the grandfather of Virginia Runnels. Beantassel himself had married young. His children were already grandpater and farther west than Farway. Beantassel was instinctively a matchmaker. He, like all other Farway people, had believed that Sam and Virginia had been created expressly for each other and never would marry otherwise, for each was now old bachelor or old maid according to the custom of speech of a section of country where boys married as soon as they reached manly stature and girls were women as soon as they got into long dresses. All sorts of plans had been made by Farwayites to bring the two together again, but as no one knew how the original estrangement occurred, and Virginia was very proud of Sam and was very stubborn, all such match mending efforts had failed. Yet Beantassel dreamed with his eyes open, and what can one not hope in a dream? He recalled incidents and situations from his play days. If truth really was stranger than fiction, why might not Sam and Virginia yet outdo the wonders that Beantassel had seen enacted on the stage? Howtree's offer of a flag with which to drape the Goddess of Liberty was a sign of hope; so was his compliment to Virginia's beauty and Runnels' suggestion of Sam Howtree as reader of the Declaration of Independence. Really the possibilities were so brilliant that when the planning of the coming celebration was interrupted by an invitation for the three oldest men of the village to join the local Grand Army of the Republic past over a pall of cinder Beantassel dropped behind his fellow committeemen to dream and wonder.

When Howtree, a mug of cider in hand, announced formally to the G. A. R. that the old timers of Farway had determined to have an old fashioned Fourth of July celebration, the G. A. R. men, who were still chock full of patriotic ardor peculiar to the day, raised three mighty cheers and promised, individually and collectively, to do everything in their power to help the patriotic work along. They offered the use of all their flags, their fife and their drummer. Then the post commander, who apparently had been taking something stronger than cider, insisted on pledging for the post, four lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor, whereupon Howtree, Runnels and Beantassel emitted three hilarious yells and shook hands all round.

Before bedtime that night everybody in Farway knew of the coming celebration and had pledged attendance and assistance. Business arrangements began at once, and offers became so numerous that the committee was kept busy in passing upon them. When it became known that the committee's plan included a midday dinner for the multitude to be cooked barbecue fashion and served in the maple grove at the edge of the town, many householders promised chickens, geese, ducks, lambs and pigs, and all the colored people volunteered to do the cooking. The young women pledged themselves to supply an abundance of sandwiches, tea and coffee to be consumed immediately after the sunrise ceremonies, and the young men promised to keep ice lemonade on hand for all day long, whereupon all the small boys promised one another that the day should be the "howlingest" in the history of the town.

But when the members of the committee were finally within their own doors two-thirds of them learned that they had counted too much on their family authority, for Sam Howtree and Virginia Runnels issued declarations of independence of their own and stoutly refused to assume the parts assigned to them.

"You know I can't speak in public," said Sam to his father. "I've never raised my voice in town meetin' or experience meetin' or any other kind of meetin'."

"You was the best speaker in all the school exhibitions in your day," replied his father. "I thought so myself at the time, an' today old Jeff Runnels up an' said so without bein' asked."

"That's different from spoutin' the Declaration," said Sam. "Besides, I hadn't enough sense to hold my tongue in those days."

"Well, can't you make b'lieve you're in the same fix now, just for a few minutes, on the Fourth?"

"I don't know how to read the Declaration anyhow," Sam continued. "I never heard it well done."

"Didn't, eh? Well, I reckon that's my fault, an' I'll bring forth fruits meet for repentance as soon as possible by readin' it over to you a few times. I read it from platforms lots of times 'fore I was as old as you be, an' Judge Simmons, him that afterward went to congress an' made great speeches, said I done it to the queen's taste, though what kind of taste the queen, of no matter where, can have in a firebrand like the Declaration is more than I can explain."

"It's no use, dad," said Sam. "I back out, flat footed."

"Sho! If you won't, you won't, I s'pose, but I'm mighty sorry for it, for that proud Runnels gal will be dead sure that you was afraid to."

"What's Virginia Runnels to do with it?" asked Sam after his brown cheek had reddened.

"Oh, she goin' to be the Goddess of Liberty an' dress up in red, white an' blue an' raise the stars an' stripes on the old pole at sun-up. She'll do it in grand style too. Facts is facts, an' I'm as mad about some of 'em as anybody, but Virginia Runnels is the spellest pattern of woman in this part of the world, an' I wouldn't miss sight of her on the Fourth in that rig for—well, for a right smart rise in the price of wheat."

"I didn't s'pose she'd be willin' to show off that a-way," said Sam, wiping the perspiration from his brow, although the day had not been hot.

"Show off? There's no showin' off about it. It's all to be before old friends an' neighbors an' nobody else. There's never any showin' in town on a holiday."

Again Sam wiped his brow; then he struggled awhile with something in his throat and said:

"My best clothes won't do for that kind of a show. They're all right for church, but when a fellow has to stand up an' be looked at for a matter of half an hour, more or less, he ought to look—well, at least as good as a drummer from the city in his ev'ryday clothes."

"That's a fact, an' you shall look it," the old man replied, "if you'll read the Declaration. You shall have a new suit, like the dignified one in the pictures on the tailor shop wall, an' I'll stand the expense, an' you'll look scumprouser than all the drummers that ever come to Farway."

"You know I can't read it," said Sam. "A man that's past thirty years old ought to—"

"Tut, tut, sonny! The fact is I'm going to fire the salutes that day, an' there's no knowin' whether I'll ever have another Fourth on this side of Jordan, so I'd like to make it as much of a family affair as possible."

"If you put it that way, you know I'll do it, dad."

"Grandfather!" exclaimed Virginia Runnels when told of the patriotic duty assigned to her. "I—wrap a flag around me and stand on a platform before all Farway? Why, what will the people say?"

"Only what they've said a thousand times already," the old man replied as he enjoyed the brilliancy and animation which sudden excitement had imparted to his darling's beauty. "They'll say that you're the most glorious creature that's got loose from heaven in a long time."

"Don't be silly, grandfather! Oh, I simply can't, but I won't make a show of myself on the Fourth!"

"If you won't," sighed the old man, "you won't, I suppose, but it's gallsin' to think that stupid Sam Howtree, who's to read the Declaration, will think you backed out because he is to be on the platform. All the gals 'll think so too."

For a moment Virginia looked like a goddess of the avenging species, but soon she became herself again and declared that the other girls were a lot of silly little gossip and Sam Howtree wasn't stupid; he was only—she neglected to say what.

"His father is a man of correct taste, anyway, an' a gentleman besides," said Runnels, "for when I suggested that the flag should be raised by a Goddess of Liberty in good old Virginia style Howtree spoke up an' said, you were the only gal fit to play the goddess, an' he asked as a favor that he might buy the flag for you to wear an' said it should be the finest one that could be bought anywhere. Jasper Howtree ain't given to throwin' away praise an' money either."

Virginia's color came and went. Her eyes flashed; then they modestly traced the stripes in the carpet. The old man laid his hand on her head and said:

"Virginia, dear, for the honor of the old state, for the sake of the only Virginian born that's in all Farway an' one that would feel young ag'in to see one of his own flesh an' blood haul up the dear old flag, couldn't you bring yourself to do it?"

Virginia struggled with herself until she looked handsomer, prouder and sweeter than any goddess in paint or marble; then she answered:

"Yes."

It seemed to the small boys and also to Howtree, Beantassel and Runnels that the Fourth would never come. The sun and the almanac, however, re-

57 per cent Plaster,
4 " " Salt petre,

The same compound may be prepared by any one for less than one cent per pound. If you want to use Paris Green the cheaper way is to buy and use it straight, but if you want to use something that will positively not injure the plant, and as surely kill the bugs

Use BUC DEATH

It costs more but goods things always do.

The difference in cost is surely made up in increased yield.

This I can prove by those who have made repeated tests.

FEEDING A MILLION MOUTHS.

There are a million little mouths in your skin ready to absorb whatever comes to them. What kind of soap do you feed them? We seldom reckon with the powers of absorption exercised by the pores of the skin, and yet it is possible for these little mouths to take in four quarts of water in twenty-four hours. No wonder impure toilet and bath soaps are so apt to produce skin diseases. You can trust the soaps we sell you. We handle none but worthy brands, and by buying in quantities we are able to make low prices on them.

NOW IN NORWAY.

Prof. Coffey

THE GREAT HEALER

Who created such a furore of excitement in Lewiston, Auburn, Bath, Augusta and Bangor recently by curing hundreds of all manner of diseases thought to be incurable. Is now at the Elm House, Norway, Me., will remain some time. Consultation free until July 24, from 9 a. m. till 8 p. m. daily.

Professor Coffey, the celebrated specialist in famous natural healing is the same gifted man who stood on the open stage of Journal Hall, Lewiston, quite recently and publicly cured hundreds of people in the presence of thousands of their astonished neighbors, causing much enthusiasm.

Prof. Coffey is a man of charming presence, of unusual physical strength and magnetic power. No such man has visited this place before.

Coffey does not resort to the use of dangerous medicines to produce these marvelous results. He, (by the simple laying on of the hands), transmits the vital force of the afflicted person's brain to the defective parts of their bodies and the result in many cases is obtained in a moment of time.

His magic touch makes the blind to see, the deaf to hear, the crippled to walk, and the sick and suffering to rejoice and call down blessings on his head.

Now is your opportunity to get the opinion of an expert free. Professor Coffey has cured to stay cured thousands of cases of rheumatism and paralysis as well as the sick and suffering. He has affected a permanent cure of stubborn cases in a few days time. James Kiskaden had been laid up for seven months with rheumatism, could not even dress or undress himself. Professor Coffey cured him in four days.

W. J. Heyford had not walked across the floor for nine months on account of rheumatism. In one week after receiving his first treatment he walked two miles. Miss Emma Blodgett had not raised her right arm to her head for over a year being paralyzed. In two weeks after receiving her first treatment she went to work cured.

A lady who has received treatment reports that this is the first week in three years she has not suffered from rheumatism. She declares that the three treatments she received from Professor Coffey was worth a thousand dollars to her. Hundreds of people in New England who were deaf had been hearing permanently restored by Prof. Coffey; others their eyesight. Many apparently hopeless paralytics have been permanently benefited so that they are enabled to earn their living.

Prof. Coffey's method of healing is not an experiment, it is scientific in every way and has passed the experimental stage.

It is neither mesmerism, hypnotism, Christian Science, mind or faith cure although it has been classed with these things by those who have heard of but never investigated.

Many who have been treated and cured by Professor Coffey declare that it matters not what you have been done, if there is any cure for you in this world the professor will permanently cure you. By a single treatment he often gets results that could not be obtained in any other way.

Here every case is examined and if a cure is possible, you are as sure of it as you are of the sun rising, if, however, you are beyond relief, no amount of money would induce the professor to accept your case. He heals the sick, and cures those who are diseased, and he does it upon scientific principles.

Marvelous as his work may appear, he is simply doing that which history and the teachings of science show has been done and can be done, and that which well-informed men know can be done and is being done in this age. His work has been successful and most magnificently successful.

His wonderful success has spread like wild-fire among those who had given up all hope of ever being well again, and they are by hundreds availing themselves of his miraculous power and gift of healing, which has proved to be the surest, quickest and most reliable means of cure ever offered a long suffering humanity.

All important cases should book their names at once, as it gives preference over others.

There is scarcely a case of disease that will not succumb to the magic hands of Prof. Coffey. Along the whole category of human ills, such as catarrh, pulmonary complaints, liver and kidney troubles, paralysis and all diseases of the nervous system, tumors and gottres removed without the knife or the loss of a drop of blood, all stomach disturbances, spinal and cerebral disorders, female weaknesses of all descriptions, rheumatism of all its forms, such as rheumatic gout, inflammation of the joints, deafness, all diseases of the ear and eye, no matter what the trouble may be, there is hope as long as Prof. Coffey is around.

To avoid afternoon and evening crowd, call as early in the day and week as possible.

Preserve this for reference as it may not appear again. If you are not afflicted please hand it to someone who is. 25-29
